Jorgensen: "Right to Work" Wrong for Wisconsin

MADISON – Assembly Democratic Caucus Chair and State Representative Andy Jorgensen (D-Milton) released this statement, following news that Republican leaders will call an extraordinary session of the Legislature to consider "right to work" legislation:

"So-called right to work legislation seemed to be on the back burner, until Governor Walker had a PR nightmare on his hands with his budget.

"Now, Republicans desperately want to distract from Walker's cuts to the UW System, to public schools, and to popular and much-needed programs like SeniorCare. They're playing a dangerous game of misdirection, jeopardizing Wisconsin's economy and family-supporting Wisconsin jobs.

"Right to work' is wrong for working-class families, who stand to lose income and job opportunity. 'Right to work' is wrong for Wisconsin."
